A LOVE POEM.

Into my heart a silent look
Flashed from thy careless eyes,
And what before was shadow, took
The light of summer skies.
The first-born love was in that look,
The Venus rose from out the deep
Of those inspiring eyes.

My life, like some lone, solemn spot
A spirit passes o'er,
Grew instinct with a glory not
In earth or heaven before.
Sweet trouble stirred the haunted spot,
And shook the leaves of every thought
Thy presence wafted o'er.

My being yearned, and erept to thine,
As it, in days of yore,
Thy son had been a part of mine,
Which claimed it back once more,
Thy very self no longer thine,
But merged in that delicious life
Which made us one of yore.

There bloomed beside thee forms as fair,
There murmured tones as sweet,
But round thee breathed the enchanted air,
'Twas death and life to meet.
And henceforth thou alone wert fair,
And though the stars had sung for joy,
Thy whisper only sweet.

REVEREND.

ON FIRE FOR A HUNDRED YEARS.

The London News says: "One of the most curious phenomena in connection with coal mining is exhibited at the Bank Colliery, near Rotherham, the property of Earl Fitzwilliam. This pit caught fire one hundred years ago, and all the efforts of the workmen at the time, and subsequently, have been quite ineffectual to extinguish it. A short time ago it was ascertained that the flames were approaching the bottom of the shaft, and it was then resolved if possible to stay their progress, so that they might not extend to other parts of the workings. At length the Superintendent of the collieries, Mr. T. Cooper, conceived the idea of building a wall to shut in the fire, and in order to ascertain the best site for this wall, several of the officials crept on their hands and knees through the dense stifling smoke as far as was possible into the workings. There efforts were successful, and a wall is now completed nearly 1,000 yards in length, and varying from 9 inches to 5 feet. At distances varying from 30 to 50 yards metal pipes have been inserted in this wall, which are securely plugged at the end, so that by removing the plugs, the state of the air on the side of the fire itself, can be ascertained. So intense is the heat arising from this fire that people possessing gardens above the colliery, declare that the growth of plants is materially affected, and that they are enabled to obtain two and three crops a year.

A lighthouse keeper, recently appointed on the New Jersey coast, made a ridiculous blunder. Immediately after he had taken possession, complaints were made that the lights went out by twelve o'clock. The proper officer was at once sent to look into the matter, and he was told that complaints were made against him. "For what?" was the inquiry. "Why," replied the officer, "they say that our lights do not burn after twelve o'clock at night." "Well," was the reply, "I know they don't, for I put 'em out myself then, for I thought all the vessels had got in by that time, and I wanted to save the oil!"

Not a stone has remained standing of the old Palace of Malmaison, made famous by the divorced wife of Napoleon I, Josephine. It has been the headquarters of a Prussian army corps, and was destroyed by the shells from Mont Valerien. Several shells fell on the roof, and at last the palace took fire and burned to the ground. It was impossible to save any of the many relics that were in the palace, as the whole was wrapped in flames.

Young men who go to see girls have adopted a novel method of obtaining kisses. They assert, on the authority of scientific writers, that the concussion produced by a kiss will cause the flame of a gas jet to flicker, and easily induce the girl to try the experiment in the interest of science. The first kiss or two the parties watch the flame to see it flicker, but soon become so interested in the experiment as to let it flicker if it wants to.

The following speech is attributed to a member of the Legislature of Pennsylvania: "I know wimmin, Mr. Speaker; I say it in no disrespect; I know um; I have had a heap to do with um. They're a useful class, and—yet with the best of um you may have trouble."

HAVE YOU SEEN MY CAMEL?

The Origin of the Saying.

Saudi was taking his evening stroll toward the gardens outside of Shiraz, when his attention was drawn to a plot of clover which had been eaten all round the edges and the center left. Seeing by the footprints that it had been a camel grazing, he commenced thinking why it had not eaten into the center, and came to the conclusion that the camel must have been blind of one eye. On going round the corner of the plot he found it had there been unloaded. Noticing where the animal had knelt while his load was removed, he saw on one side a lot of "maggus," large flies, and on the other a lot of smaller ones, "pasha." After thinking for some time what could be the cause of these two sorts of flies accumulating, he concluded that one side of the load had been meat and the other side sugar. Seeing near the spot the imprints of a woman's shoes, and also the marks of her hands, he concluded that she had been a stout woman, and had put her hands on the ground to assist her in rising. With this he moved on. Presently he was overtaken by a man, who inquired if he had seen a camel. Saudi said, "Had it only one eye?" The man answered, "By the beard of the Prophet, you are right." And was it loaded part meat and part sugar?" "As I am your sacrifice you are right." And had it a stout woman with it?" "By the holy Kebra, it had." "Well," said Saudi, "I have seen nothing of your camel." At which the fellow got in a passion and beat Saudi with a stick, asking him how it was possible to describe the camel and its appurtenances so correctly if he had not seen it. Ever after this, Sheikh Saudi advised his friends not to prevaricate, as they might get thrashed for their pains. It is also a standing saying, used in the following manner: If a person wishes another to keep a secret, he asks him, "Have you seen my camel?" If the person intends to say nothing about what he knows, he answers, "I have not even seen its foot-marks."

THE SHOW BUSINESS IN CHURCH.

A little episode occurred in the Lutheran Church, of this place, on Sunday night, 15th inst., which is worth mentioning. As the evening service was about to close the pastor took occasion to admonish his congregation against attending the exhibitions being given in the Town Hall by a minstrel troupe, and in his remarks denounced the show as a low, vulgar, or indecent concern. It so happened that half a dozen members of the troupe were present, and no sooner had Mr. Brown concluded than up jumps one of the showmen, who, after apologizing for the interruption, stated that it was his bounden duty then and there to deny, in toto, the imputations made against the troupe by the pastor. The company, he said was a proper one, and the performance not only decent, but entirely moral in all its appointments. "Moreover," said the showman, "I am a member of a church myself, and I know of no wrong I do in belonging to this show." Of course such a digression from the usual order of things created an immense sensation, and various outbursts of sentiment were made all over the church. One member told the minister not to get excited, while others commanded the showman to sit down. The whole affair was over in a few minutes, for the showman, after saying his say, very quietly resumed his seat. But the town had something to talk about next day, and the effect of such conspicuous advertising was, the Town Hall on Monday night's exhibition was full to overflowing.—[Lewiston (Pa.) Democrat.

There is at present in Montreal, a widow of 22, who is the mother of nine children. She was married at 13, and before her seventeenth birthday presented her lord with twins; the following year she produced at one birth three boys; the next year she had twins, and repeated the performance the following year—making nine children, the oldest being barely four. The children are all living and doing well.

A Virginia paper cites as a remarkable instance of the efficacy of abstaining from medicine a lady in that State who has reached the age of ninety-six, and throughout all the long years of her life has taken but three pills, and has buried three husbands.

A Western gentleman lately put himself to bed on the steps of a church, and, trying to fold the snow flakes around him, declared every time he grasped a handful that the darned sheets always tore so.

It is said when a Russian husband neglects to give his wife a sound thrashing for more than a week, she begins to feel alarmed at his indifference.
